- Did you know there are around 37,000 community services workers in South Australia? That's 4% of our state's workforce- and although they do essential work, they don't often get the recognition they deserve. That's why SACOSS is launching a new campaign to recognise, promote and build pride in the community sector - #HereForSA
- Right now there are thousands of people, employed by hundreds of organisations, all working hard to help South Australians in need. We think it's time to give them a public shout-out – to show our support to the people who support South Australia. #HereForSA #SATHanks
- There are 765 registered community services organisations in South Australia - all working tirelessly to support us when we need it the most! From aged care to youth work, from social support to crisis care, community services do so much to ensure all South Australians have the opportunity to live a good life. It's time to #SAyThanks to all workers across these organisations. Thank you for being #HereForSA
- There are 54,209 community volunteers in South Australia. Their willingness to offer their time and expertise improves the lives of so many people in the community – and their work also helps our sector to keep running smoothly. Today, we thank our state's community volunteers for their kindness and generosity. Thank you for being #HereForSA
- The community services sector plays a huge role in the South Australian economy - 37,000 workers and 54,209 volunteers across 765 organisations, with a total sector revenue of $2.996bn. That's 2.7% of the state's economy! But the importance of our sector goes way beyond its economic value. The 4% of workers who provide vital services to South Australia don't often get the recognition they deserve. It's time to #SAyThanks to all the community services who are #HereForSA
